DATED FEBRUARY 15, 1940.,

THE NAME AND FAMILY OF COVELL

The surname of COVELL is beleived by some historians to be corruption of the French Colville, meaning literally "Col's Estate", which was first taken as a surname by those who made their homes at Colville, Normandy. It is possible, however, that in some cases the name was of ancient English origin and derived from the words cofa and health, meaning "Dweller at a Cove or Cave". In ancient English and early American records the name appears in the various spellings of Covelle, Coval, Covall, Coville, Covill, Covile, Covel, Covell, of which the last is the form most frequently found in America in modern times.

Possibly of Norman descent, William Covell, was living in the early sixteenth Century, and before, at Aynderby-in-the-Myre, in Yorkshire, England. His son, also named William seised of the Manor of Fremington, in York, about the year of 1534, being then about thirty years of age. The last mentioned William was the father of two sons, Thomas and Henry Covell, of whom the first left issue by his wife Cecillie of at least three children, John, Thomas and Grace.

Frances Covell, who was in the county of Suffolk England, in the latter half of the sixteenth century, was the father by his wife Margery of Captain Thomas Covell, who was living in London in 1633. Captain Thomas married Hellena, daughter of William Broadribb, of "Haveringe Parke", County, Essex, about 1629, To this union were born at least two children, Frances and Thomas.

Among the later records of the name in London are those of Thomas Covell, of all Hallows Barking, Skinner, Bachelor", who married Martha, daughter of Abraham Pococke or Pecocke, in 1610; those of Michael Covell, "Gentlemen", formerly of West Wickham, County, Kent, who was married at London in 1644 to Judith Blagge, There was also John Covel or Covell (also recorded as Colvill), who was master of Christs College, Cambridge, in the latter half of the seventeenth century. This John was born at Horningsheath, County, Suffolk, in 1638, and died in 1722.

Famlies bearing the name were resident at early dates not only in the Counties of York, Kent, Suffolk, and London, but also of Essex and Lancaster, in the latter of which places the names were generally written Covill.

Many of the lines appear to have belonged to the landed and educated classes of Great Britan.

As early as 1637 John Covell came from England to America and settled in Charles River County, Va., Another John Covell was living in Lower Norfolk County, Va., in 1641; Nicholas Covell settled in Virginia in 1648; and in 1652 Henry Covell was living in Lancaster County Va., The records of these lines are only fragmentary, but it is probable that their decendants are numerous.

Nathaniel Covel (also recorded as Covell, Covil, and Covill), the son of another Nathaniel Covel, of Chelmsford, County, Essex, arrived at Boston, in New England, in 1653. He later removed to Yarmouth, on Cape Cod, and was married about 1661 to Sarah Nickerson. Nathaniel died before 1687, leaving isseu of, Nathaniel, William, Ephraim, Joseph, and a daughter who married Benjamin Phillips before 1700.

Nathaniel Covell or Covel, son of the immigrant Nathaniel, resided at Eastham, Mass., and was married in 1696 or 1697 to Judith Nickerson, probably a cousin. His children were John, Seth, Simeon, Hannah, Jane, Nathaniel, and Elizabeth.

William Covel or Covell, son of the immigrant Nathaniel, removed to Harwich and thence to what is now Wellfleet. Ephraim and William Covel Jr, were living in Wellfleet in 1741, and in 1736 Mrs. Joanna Covel died at that place. It is probable that these were the children and wife of William, but the records are not complete.

Ephriam Covel or Covell, son of the immigrant Nathaniel, made his home in Harwich. He married three times, his first wife being named Mercy, the second being Abigail Dllis, whom he married in 1729 or 1730, and the third being the Widow Mary Taylor, of Chatham, whom he married in 1746. The Children of Ephriam were Thankful, Sarah, Mercy and Mary.

Joseph Covel or Covell, son of the immigrant Nathaniel, was married about 1700 to Lydia Stuart, who was the daughter named Lydia and died soon afterward. In 1703 or 1704 Joseph took a second wife, Hannah Bassett, of Eastham. To this union was born at least one son, named James, who married Mehitable Nickerson of Harwich, in 1727. To the last Mentioned union were born ten children, Mehitable, Ruth, Drusilla, Hannah, (died young), Joseph (died in infancy), another Joseph, another Hannah, James, Constant, and Samuel. By a second wife, the Widow Ruth Kelley, whom he married before 1764, James had three children, Ruth, Joshua, and Hathan.

Samuel Covil, who w s undoubtedly a descendant ot the before-mentioned family, was born at Yarmouth, in Barnstable County, Mass., in 1763, the son of Nathaniel and Rebecca (nee Rider) Covill or Covel. The last-mentioned Nathaniel is called the son of John and Thankful (nee Bangs) Covil or Covel, of Yarmouth. Samuel was the father by his wife Mary Hollaway, of Gracy, Elizabeth, Sylvanus, Allen, Deborah, Samuel Jr., and Rebecca, most of whom were born at Fairfield, in Somerset County, Me.,

One John Covell was living at Marblehead, Mass., in 1668, but his family records are not available.

Some time before 1688, one Phillip Covell settled in Malden, Mass. In that year he married Elizabeth Atwood, of Malden, by whom he had, prabably among other children, a daughter named Sarah.

Toward the end of the eighteenth century James Covell, formerly of Savannah, settled at Rose, N.Y.; and his children included James, Maranda, Hiram, Seymour, and Charles Covell, Of these, James settled in Virginia; Hiram removed to Ohio; Seymour remained at Rose, N.Y.; and Charles removed to Michigan.

The records of the Covells in America is that of a strong, dynamic, and determined race. Some of them have been prominent in the Church, in Science, and in professional life generally.

The Revolutionary rolls of the Colonial forces in the last quarter of the eighteenth century included the names of Benjamin, Daniel, Ensign Ephrim, Ebenezer, Edward, Eliphalet Ezra, Henry, Isaac, Jethro, Surgeons Mate John, Hohn Jr. Joseph, Joseph Jr., Nathaniel, Peter, Phillip, Richard, Captain Samuel, Solomon, Ensign Thomas, and William Covel, Covell, Covill, or Covil (recorded in many cases under all four forms of the name), of Massachusetts; Thomas and William Covil or Covill, of Rhode Island; Samuel Covel, of Pennsylvania; and many more from the other States of that period.

William, Thomas, John, Nathaniel, Ephraim, Jamse, Joseph, Samuel, Benjamin, and Charles are among the masculine Christian names more frequently used by the Covells for their Progeny.

Of the barers of the name who have been prominent in America at various times, the following are considered re-resenative.

Jamse Covell (1796 - 1845), of Massachusetts and New York, clergyman and author.

Alanson L. Covell (1804 - 1837), of New York, clergyman.

Charles Hathaway Covell (1829 - 1910), of Massachusetts, clergyman and author.

Alton Giles Covell (1854), of Pennsylvania and North Dakota, lawyer, legislature, and financier.

Fredrick Vernon Covelle (1867 - 1937), of New York and Washington, botanist.

Louis Chapin Covell (1875), of Michigan, army Officer.

A coat of arms anciently borne by the English family of Covell is described in heraldic terms as follows (Burke, Encyclopaedia of Heraldry, 1844,

Arms. — "Or, a cheveron between three martlets sable,"

It is also of interest to note that the arms of the Covills of England is described by the same authority as; Arms. --" Or, a feese gules, in chief three torteaux."
